

She also loves working outdoors in many types of weather. She always carries a radio, first-aid kit, water, snacks and sunscreen in her backpack wherever she goes. The Grand Canyon is her office!

---

Interpretive park rangers teach people about what makes each national park special and what they can all do to take care of it. They lead hikes, teach school field trips, work at visitor centers and help people stay safe during their visit.

---

Park rangers wear a professional outfit. The flat hat protects them from the hot sun, and hiking boots allow them to walk rocky trails. The National Park Service symbol on the sleeve of their outfit shirt helps visitors recognize them so they can ask for assistance.

---

National parks are like outdoor museums. They preserve some of America's most beautiful and historic places. Park rangers protect the park's animals, plants, land, buildings and people.

---

Protection rangers make sure visitors follow the rules while exploring the parks. They complete special law enforcement training to do their jobs. They may also rescue stranded or sick people, provide medical care, fight wildfires and work at large events such as the presidential inauguration in Washington.

---

One of Ann's favourite parts of her job is showing children their first view of the Grand Canyon during school field trips. Children are often amazed at the canyon's size and colors. Sometimes, they think it looks like a painting.

---

Source: <https://www.washingtonpost.com/lifestyle/kidspost/what-its-like-to-be-a-national-park-ranger>

---

She also loves working outdoors in many types of weather. She always carries a radio, first-aid kit, water, snacks and sunscreen in her backpack wherever she goes. The Grand Canyon is her office!

---

Interpretive park rangers teach people about what makes each national park special and what they can all do to take care of it. They lead hikes, teach school field trips, work at visitor centers and help people stay safe during their visit.

---

Park rangers wear a professional outfit. The flat hat protects them from the hot sun, and hiking boots allow them to walk rocky trails. The National Park Service symbol on the sleeve of their outfit shirt helps visitors recognize them so they can ask for assistance.

---

National parks are like outdoor museums. They preserve some of America's most beautiful and historic places. Park rangers protect the park's animals, plants, land, buildings and people.

---

Protection rangers make sure visitors follow the rules while exploring the parks. They complete special law enforcement training to do their jobs. They may also rescue stranded or sick people, provide medical care, fight wildfires and work at large events such as the presidential inauguration in Washington.

---

One of Ann's favourite parts of her job is showing children their first view of the Grand Canyon during school field trips. Children are often amazed at the canyon's size and colors. Sometimes, they think it looks like a painting.

---

Source: <https://www.washingtonpost.com/lifestyle/kidspost/what-its-like-to-be-a-national-park-ranger>